Red alert sounded in Kerala after weather office predicted extremely heavy rainfall in the state

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, July 16

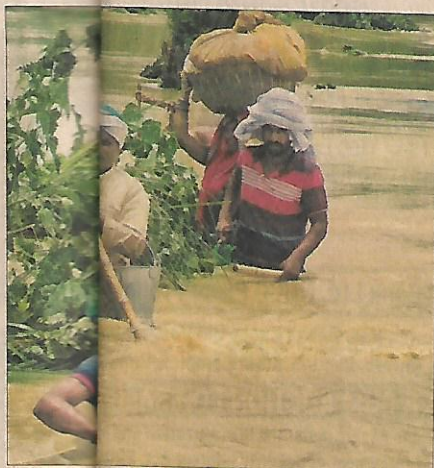

THE FLOOD FURY continued in Bihar and Assam on Tuesday with the death toll in the region mounting to 47, even as a red alert was sounded in Kerala after the weather office predicted extremely heavy rainfall in the state.

Heavy rain continued to lash Punjab and Haryana in the north, while the national capital received light showers for the second consecutive day.

An India Meteorological Department (IMD) bulletin said extremely heavy rainfall, over 204 mm rainfall in 24 hours, are likely in six districts of Kerala. In flood-hit Bihar, 25 people have so far been killed in flash floods and 25.71 lakh people affected in 16 districts.

According to officials, unusual torrential rainfall in catchment areas in Nepal and subsequent massive discharge of water in rivers led to flash floods in Bihar, where more than 1 lakh people have been moved to safer areas.

The city recorded a high of 33.4°C, two notches below normal, and a low of 24°C.

Meanwhile, heavy rain continued to lash many parts of Punjab and Haryana.

The water level of Ghaggar river in Patiala district was flowing close to the danger mark in the morning, but by the evening, the level reduced, officials said. "There was localised flooding in some parts, but there is no need to panic," Patiala Deputy Commissioner Kumar Amit said.

There were also reports of heavy rains in Bathinda in Punjab and Ambala in Haryana, leading to water-logging in many low-lying areas. Chandigarh recorded a high of 28.3°C, five notches below normal limits, a meteorological department report said here. The Met has forecast more rains in the two states until Thursday. Rainfall in several parts of Himachal brought down the day temperatures in the state, with Karsog being the wettest with 70 mm of rainfall.
